The QR code or barcode will be detected automatically once you have positioned the code within the guidelines.

Media Platforms Design TeamSee that thing at the right there? You've probably noticed these around, mainly on advertisements. It's called a QR code, and marketers want you to use your smartphone's camera to "read" it. Here's what you should know about them... and how to make your own!QR (Quick Response) codes are a type of barcode — not unlike the vertically-lined ones on every product you buy — that provide information when read by a scanner equipped to interpret it. They were first used in the mid-90s by a Japanese car manufacturer as a way to keep track of parts, but marketers have begun using them as a fun way to encode and share additional information with consumers, beyond what they can squeeze into an advertisement. (The one shown here is Good Housekeeping's.)After downloading an app (I like QuickMark, but there are a ton of options out there), you use your smartphone's camera to capture the code. You'll then immediately be asked if you'd like to see whatever info the code indicates — it could be a prompt to go to a website URL or to send an e-mail (say, to enter a contest). Marketers are also using them to offer discounts and coupons — a reason it really pays to look for these on ads. Further, tech savvy companies are putting them on employees' business cards, so the contact info can be quickly read and imported into a recipient's cell phone's address book.To create your own, you can use a phone app (QuickMark does this), or go to a QR generator website, such as QRStuff.com or Qurify.com. Some ideas for what you might encode: your contact info, your Facebook profile page URL, or even a Google Map of your house (for a party invitation, for example). Once created, you can save the square code as an image file that you can share or paste wherever you see fit, or you can email or text it to your friends and family (phone apps can also interpret codes sent this way).Have you ever scanned a QR code? What do you think of them? And how might you use a self-created one? Please tell us in the comments below. QR codes may not be as prolific as they once were, but they’re still highly useful for quickly sharing information. The thing is, it’s not always clear how to scan one. If you’re an Android user, here’s the skinny. The Easiest Way: Use Google Lens in the Assistant You may not realize this, but if your phone has Google Assistant, you have a fast, easy, and native way to scan QR codes baked right into your handset. First, long-press the home button to bring up Assistant. Depending on which version of Assistant you have, you might have the Lens button right there as soon as Assistant pops up. Most likely, however, you need to tap on it to stop it from listening for a voice command. Just tap on the colored dots. Once it stops listening, new options become available: Lens to the left of the mic, keyboard to the right. Tap on the “Lens” button. If this is the first time you’ve used Lens, you’ll need to activate it. Just follow the prompts and then grant it camera access. On the first run, it’ll give you a quick rundown of things you can do with Lens. Just swipe that away and move the QR into the camera’s view. Within seconds, it will show you what the QR is—just tap on it to execute. So, in our test case, tapping the QR navigates to howtogeek.com. Easy peasy. Option Two: Use the Google Lens App Some may argue that this is actually easier than option one, and to that, I say…maybe. The only reason I consider the first option to be easier is that your phone already has it—pretty much all modern Android handsets come with Assistant, so there’s no need to install another app. But if you’re all about installing other apps, then here you go. First, fire up the Google Play Store and hit up the Google Lens page. Install that bad boy. Once installed, you’ll need to give it permissions and whatnot (assuming you haven’t already done so within Assistant). From there, just scan your QR code. Done and done. Now, whenever you need to scan a QR, fire up Lens and get it done. So fast. (Image credit: Laptop Mag) After years of failing to find a foothold, QR codes have become quite popular and knowing how to scan a QR code on iPhone is incredibly useful. Many restaurants, parking facilities and other businesses have adopted the confusing-looking code blocks as the preferred method for whisking users to their website or app without having to enter a URL. If you've found yourself wondering how to scan a QR code then you aren't alone. The good news is that Apple has made this quite easy on your iPhone with two methods that take just a few seconds. How to scan a QR code on iPhone with the camera appiOS 11 first introduced the ability to scan a QR code directly from the preinstalled camera app, so this method will work for any iPhone going back to the iPhone 5s. As you probably are already used to opening your camera quickly to avoid missing any great photos, this is going to be the easiest method for most people. Here's how to scan a QR code on iPhone using the camera app:Open the Camera appAlign your camera with the QR code until it is in focusTap on the URL or prompt that appears on your screenThat's it! Depending on whether the QR code was for a website, app or Wi-Fi network it may prompt you to download the app or join the Wi-Fi network, but you should be on your way. (Image credit: Laptop Mag)iOS 14 introduced another integrated way to scan a QR code on iPhone. This means this method will work for any phone going back to the iPhone 6s (assuming you have updated to iOS 14). This is an app that is simply called Code Scanner. Don't think you have it? Well, you do, Apple just hid it from you. Here's how to scan a QR code on iPhone using the Code Scanner app:Swipe down from the middle of your screen to bring up SearchTap in the search barType "Code Scanner"Tap on Code Scanner in the first boxAlign your camera with the QR code until it is in focusTap on the URL or prompt that appears on your screenWhat are the advantages of using Code Scanner over the Camera app? Code Scanner uses a built-in browser, which is nice so you don't have one-off visits like a menu or parking cluttering up your Safari tabs. Code Scanner also adds some fun animations to the scanning process. First, it shows a capture of the QR code. From there, it shows an icon for what the link is taking you to. For example, the Wi-Fi QR Code that I used as my example produced a Wi-Fi icon. If you're going to a website, it will show a Safari icon before opening it. Nothing crucial, but it's a nice contained experience that is supported on almost every iPhone so give it a shot next time you need to scan a QR code.How to add Code Scanner to Control Center on iPhoneIf you find that you do prefer Code Scanner you can make it more easily accessible by adding it to Control Center. Just go to Settings > Control Center and then tap on the green plus icon next to Code Scanner and now it will be available in Control Center when you swipe down from the top-right of your iPhone.(Image credit: Laptop Mag)Today's best Apple iPhone 12 deals (Image credit: Laptop Mag) Knowing how to scan a QR code on Android has become a crucial skill over the last 18 months with many restaurants, parking facilities, and other venues adopting the code blocks. Why? Because it's an easy method to link customers to a website or app without forcing them to type in a long URL. QR codes got lots of attention over a decade ago when smartphones were first rising to prominence, but until the last couple of years, they had never managed to catch on. If you have memories of frustrating interactions with them a year ago, don't worry, it's a much simpler process now regardless of which Android phone you own.How to scan a QR code on Android with the camera app (Android 9 or later)Modern Android phones typically let you scan a QR code directly from the built-in camera app. This ability was one of the biggest turning points for QR code adoption as it removed the additional step of having to find and install a separate QR code scanner. If your Android phone is running Android 9 or later then you can follow these instructions to scan a QR code.Open the Camera app.Align your camera with the QR code until it is in focus. On OnePlus phones, tap the Google Lens button to the left of the shutter. Tap on the URL that appears on your screen.That's it! The QR code should have whisked you off to the appropriate website or app. If you are having difficulties with the QR code triggering automatically on a Pixel, you can use the dedicated Google Lens mode in the camera as well.(Image credit: Laptop Mag)How to scan a QR code on Android with a separate app (Android 8 or earlier)Samsung and some other manufacturers introduced QR code readers before it was part of Android, but if you have a phone running Android 8 or earlier, you may need an app to scan QR codes. While there are thousands of QR code scanner apps in Google Play, I would recommend sticking to one of the many mobile browsers that offer a QR code scanner because I have greater faith in the security of these apps. A couple of popular options to consider are Mozilla Firefox (opens in new tab) or Microsoft Edge (opens in new tab).How to scan a QR code with Mozilla Firefox:Open Mozilla Firefox.Tap in the search bar.Tap the Scan button. The first time you may need to grant Firefox permission to take pictures and record video. Align your camera with the QR code until it is in focus.Click Allow when prompted.How to scan a QR code with Microsoft Edge:Open Microsoft Edge.Tap on the camera icon in the search bar. The first time you may need to grant Edge permission to take pictures and record video. Select Barcode at the bottom left of the screen.Align your camera with the QR code until it is in focus.Today's best Microsoft Office 365 deals (opens in new tab) (opens in new tab) (opens in new tab) (opens in new tab) (opens in new tab)View Deal (opens in new tab) (opens in new tab) (opens in new tab)View Deal (opens in new tab)
